PARTNER HIGHLIGHT

Healthcare Domain

Joanne Drinkwater, MS, RD, IBCLC, Community Outreach Associate, American Red Cross WIC Program

Although quite new to town, she hit the ground running and has made quite a name for herself with leaders in the healthcare field. Joanne Drinkwater is a Community Outreach Associate for the American Red Cross Women, Infants and Children (WIC) Agency in San Diego. She has lived all over the world as an Air Force spouse, and thankfully, three years ago, settled in San Diego (for good, she says - she is ready to stay put.)

Joanne has been part of the team developing the groundbreaking American Academy of Pediatrics, CA Chapter 3 (AAP-CA3) Provider Outreach Project at WIC. The program seeks to educate healthcare providers about the new food package, train providers on the new WIC referral form, and encourage providers to reinforce WIC educational messages. The project conducts in-service trainings on the WIC program and each clinic visit is tailored to the needs of the particular office, considering such factors as the community, patient demographics and baseline knowledge of the staff. Follow-up visits and phone calls are made to enhance the outreach and education program effectiveness.

“Joanne joined our healthcare domain and has been wonderful in helping us educate our partners about the changes in WIC. Her commitment to collaborate and share that knowledge has benefitted us all,” states Cheri Fidler, co-champion, healthcare domain.

WIC has been the premier public health nutrition program for 35 years. The WIC program has helped pregnant women, new mothers and young children eat well, stay healthy, and be active. Approximately 40-50% of all US children are on WIC during their preschool years.

“My role is to share the many existing WIC resources with health care providers, community partners, and the AAP to insure that they all know about our many changes, new programs, and improvements in real time”, offers Drinkwater. “Those of us in pediatric healthcare know that our children are our future, and our collective efforts today will positively impact generations to come.”

Many San Diego health promotion community projects and collaboratives are unaware of the specific services and resources that WIC can offer for free. By linking WIC to these groups, like the San Diego County Childhood Obesity Initiative and its partners, we can maximize service, reinforce the key health messages, and sustain its progress.

Joanne is proud to share that she hails from Salem, Massachusetts and it is no surprise Halloween is her favorite holiday. Before moving to San Diego, Joanne spent 11 years with the WIC Program in Antelope Valley, and served as the Chief Clinical Dietitian at Antelope Valley Hospital for four years prior to that. In her free time, Joanne lends her expertise with the San Diego County Breastfeeding Coalition. On a lighter note, Joanne just finished fashioning her garden to attract birds and butterflies.

DOMAIN UPDATE

Government Domain

A French writer once said: “a goal without a plan is just a wish”. The Government Domain (Domain) agrees. The first step to building a healthy community is planning for it.

This domain is at the cusp of innovation. Participants in this multi-faceted workgroup — health and human services, parks and recreation, land-use and planning- are identifying their unique roles in obesity prevention and adopting practices that make the healthy choice more affordable and accessible to all. Public health and land-use professionals are coming together across the county to discuss opportunities to get people moving and eating healthy through smart growth concepts. Parks and recreation are talking about the influence it can have on healthy eating in addition to its traditional role providing safe places to play. As stated earlier, all of this work starts with a plan.

In California, each city is required by state law to update its General Plan every 20 years. This document sets a framework for a community’s growth and development, and includes elements pertaining to land use, circulation / transportation, housing, conservation, open space, noise, and safety. General Plan Updates offer a critical opportunity to place a public health lens on land-use and planning decisions, and the time has come for several San Diego County communities to embark on this journey. In the North, San Marcos and Escondido are pursuing public engagement in the update process. Domain representative Naomi Butler, County of San Diego Health and Human Services Agency, is providing technical assistance and advice to San Marcos on points of intersection in the Plan that can help the City prepare for changes in population and development needs while achieving specific health-orientated goals. On the coast, the City of Encinitas is working with the San Diego County Childhood Obesity Initiative and Healthy Eating Active Living (HEAL) Campaign to create a healthier community through multiple avenues. It is looking at the role the General Plan Update can play in increasing walkability, bikeability, and even a place where healthy foods are more accessible through community gardens and healthy retail. Naomi Butler is also lending her expertise to National City to help with the development of a health and environmental justice element to be added to its General Plan Update.

The County of San Diego’s Department of Parks and Recreation is not to be left behind in planning for healthier outcomes. This year, a Recreation Master Plan is slated for all parks and recreation centers operating under the county umbrella. This plan will include an inventory of programs and facilities, community needs assessments, trends in recreation, and short and long-term strategies for the Department of Parks and Recreation to meet forecasted needs and provide outreach to underserved populations. The County of San Diego hopes to receive national accreditation from the National Recreation and Parks Association for this work.

If you would like to learn more about the Government Domain and its work with cities and communities to adopt best practices into policy, please contact JuliAnna Arnett.

LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

April showers bring May flowers; this old adage rings as true with rain and tulips as it does for tax day and State budgets. However, in California, there is a slight glitch in the theory. The projected personal income tax receipts for April 15 brought in less than the State projected— approximately $2 billion less. This reduction in funds translates into budget cuts and revisions and additional challenges for any new legislation sporting a State-funded price tag.

This year—and likely several years to come—expect to see bills with few proposed costs. New nutrition and physical activity legislation is following suit. In fact, many advocates promoting healthy eating and active living are identifying new revenue streams that could potentially be developed through legislative actions like the soda tax. While this session is fated to be challenging, it has stemmed a variety of inventive bills that approach our State's challenges through multiple lenses--health, environment, and finance.

Here's a short list of nutrition legislation up for debate this session:

AB 2468: (de Leon) Lactation Accommodation. This bill would authorize an employer to use the designation "Breast-Feeding Mother-Friendly Workplace" in its promotional materials if the employer submits its workplace breast-feeding policy to the Labor Commissioner and the Labor Commissioner determines that the employer's policy provides for specified criteria- flexible work schedules; sanitary, safe, and private location to express milk; and a convenient, clean, and private water source.

SB 1210: (Flores) Taxation: Sweetened Beverage Tax: Children's Health Promotion Fund. This bill would impose a $0.01 tax per teaspoon of caloric sweetener in bottled sweetened beverage or concentrate upon every person who makes the first sale in this state of bottled sweetened beverage or concentrate and on every person who uses or consumes, or places into a vending machine or retail stock, untaxed bottled sweetened beverage or concentrate.

SB 1255: (Padilla) Schools: nutrition: beverages. This bill would eliminate the selling of electrolyte replacement beverages to pupils from one-half hour before the start of the school day until one-hour after the end of the school day.

AB 2084: (Brownley) California Child Day Care Facilities: Nutrition. This bill would require a licensed child day care facility to follow specified guidelines relating to the provision of beverages— serve only 1 percent milk to children ages 2 and older, serve only 100% juice and make it available no more than once a day, serve no beverages with added sweeteners, and make clean, safe water readily available throughout the day.

FARMERS MARKET CORNER

The San Diego County Childhood Obesity Initiative covers a number of community-driven initiatives that work hard to increase access to fresh, affordable, and culturally appropriate foods in communities throughout the region. This month the Initiative is checking in with an old friend—the City Heights Farmers Market (CHFM). CHFM continues to be a great example of a neighborhood market that promotes healthy lifestyles and food self-sufficiency.

The City Heights Farmers' Market started operating in June 2008 and was the first San Diego farmers' market to accept EBT cards (electronic payment for clients of the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program—the program formerly known as food stamps).

In addition to using EBT, CHFM operates a cash incentive program called "Fresh Fund," designed to make the benefits of fresh, locally grown produce accessible to recipients of SNAP; Women, Infant, and Children (WIC); and Social Security. Each week, the Fresh Fund is distributed to individuals participating in the designated programs. The Fresh Fund dollars are in turn spent on the customer's produce of choice at the market. Since its launch, the Fresh Fund program has been such a huge success. It increases the capital for our farmers and contributes to the health and well-being of low-income residents. Residents and farmers alike can now enjoy its expansion. The program is undergoing a small change. Now with a small buy-in of their own money, Fresh Fund clients can receive matching funds from the program. This allows for the program to potentially contribute a lot more Fresh Fund dollars to its shoppers, which will hopefully further improve the local economy and community. Further, the Fresh Fund program itself is now being extended to other farmers' markets in the region, including the Valley Center Farmers' Market, San Marcos Farmers' Market, and Southeast Farmers' Market, which is scheduled to open in Southeast San Diego sometime in the near future.

This month, the City Heights Farmers' Market is gearing up for some other exciting pilot programs as well. During the second week of May, point-of-service (POS) terminals will be programmed to accept debit and credit cards, increasing the forms of payment accepted and hopefully also increasing sales.

In addition, CHFM has been selected as a pilot site for the acceptance of Women, Infants and Children (WIC) fresh fruit and vegetable vouchers. WIC clients can use their WIC dollars at CHFM to purchase fresh fruits and vegetables, which is a particularly great benefit for low-income families with small children.

Aside from providing a variety of options to access the products at the market, CHFM is also home to several community programs intended to enhance health education and cohesion within the community. Every month, patrons can enjoy cooking classes hosted by City Heights residents who make use of farmers' market produce in their recipes. There are also monthly health screenings, food stamp outreach services, and even a monthly bike ride that guides participants through the safest routes in their community, brings them to community gardens and other points of interest in the neighborhood, and even offers bike tune-ups before the ride!

If you know of a farmers' market or community garden in San Diego County promoting health through innovative activities or would like to learn more about a highlighted project, please contact JuliAnna Arnett.
